THE OVERVIEW

68 Long Lane was a commercial refurbishment project located in the heart of London. The project aimed to transform an outdated office building into a modern, vibrant workspace that would attract a diverse range of businesses. The project had a total area of 1,500 sq ft spread across 6 floors, and a value of £800,000.

The scope of works included a complete strip-out and demolition of existing finishes, followed by the installation of new structural members and brickwork to form an additional storey. The project also included a general refurbishment of the property and a full new M&E installation throughout.

One of the key challenges faced by the project team was the replacement of the shopfront. The team replaced the old shopfront with a completely new one, which was supplied by our in-house joinery. This allowed for a bespoke design that perfectly complemented the building's location in the heart of London.

Despite the limited space available due to the building's narrow footprint, the team was able to create a modern, flexible layout that is ideal for businesses of all sizes.
